

Muslim Women in Competitive Sports: NOT an Oxymoron!

Tuesday, October 4th
8:00 PM
Cole Cinema

A large number of Muslim women competed at the 2016 Rio Olympic Games and 14 of them returned with Olympic medals. Mainstream media coverage focused largely on their clothing as a symbol of oppression or reason for their poor performance, while others celebrated the way sports bring people together and promote acceptance.

Join us for a conversation with skydiver Radwa El Ghamry and a sneak preview of the documentary “Know Your Freedom” featuring the unusual story of three Arab women who negotiate dress, headscarves, marriage and even music to pursue their ambitions.

Radwa El Ghamry is team captain and manager of the world’s first Arab civil female skydiving team in Dubai. She is a alumna of Cairo University, a mother of two, and an inspiration to many Muslim women around the world pursuing their passions in traditionally male-dominated fields.

